OG SÅ KOM FYREN

A rattling piece of kitchen furniture comes ambling through the streets. This is a kitchen stove on wheels which little by little turns out to be both original and well equipped: complete with an installed shower, telephone, parasol and its own chimney!

This world belongs to a vagabond of the imagination, a naive clown who goes through the lonely ritual of her daily breakfast. Unnoticed this well-known situation begins to change. Coffee cups disappear, potatoes become carrots, doors close themselves, the frying pan jumps around..... the whole stove boils over, runs amok !

Something or someONE has set up hous in the stove, or is it the stove itself that has become alive? Or is this strange fellow simply dreaming it all? Perhaps it is, after all, in the clown's imagination that all these odd things take place?

This street theatre play has a quick, humourous acting style.

“OG SÅ KOM FYREN “ is full of excitement and magic, but the play also has a wondering poetry that provides room for afterthought. This street theatre can be played anywhere out of doors, and for groups of all ages.
